Weizenbaum Panel

Digital Citizenship—Political Communication and Participation in Germany 2021

WP3-21

Questionnaire Documentation [Translated version]

About this Questionnaire Documentation

The Weizenbaum Panel on Political Participation in Germany is a longitudinal study conducted annually by the Weizenbaum Institute for the Networked Society in cooperation with the Institute for Journalism and Communication Studies at Freie Universität Berlin. The focus is on political engagement by citizens in Germany, with a particular concern for the use of digital media and changes in political participation in the context of digitalization. Phenomena such as hate speech and fake news, which people are confronted with on the internet, are as much a part of the survey as the active commitment to a democratic debate culture. In addition, the survey looked at “citizenship norms,” i.e., ideas of how a “good citizen” should behave in our democracy. This was supplemented by questions on policy-related gender norms, i.e., opinions about what role men and women should play in society and politics.

The questionnaire documented here was used in the third survey wave during the survey period from early October to mid December 2021. A total of 1,595 people living in Germany were surveyed, about two-thirds (33.9%) of whom had already participated in the previous year’s survey in 2020. All new participants were randomly selected from the German-speaking population in Germany aged 16 and over. The survey was conducted in the telephone studio of Freie Universität Berlin and by the Institut für Umfragen, Analysen und DataScience (Institute for Surveys, Analyses and DataScience, UADS) in Duisburg. 1,074 people were interviewed by the FU Berlin and 521 by the UADS. Since both subsamples were based on independent random samples, we used them to implement split samples for a few questions. All questions are documented below. In the event that a question was only asked to one of the two subsamples, this is noted accordingly in the filtering.

Reading notes for the Questionnaire Documentation

For the purposes of quick orientation, this questionnaire documentation offers a tabular overview of the variables surveyed. These overviews contain the question title and a brief description of the associated item in addition to the variable names.

The variable names are composed according to the following pattern:
“Letter combination_two-digit number” (e.g., “SD_01”)

The letter combination indicates which variables belong to the same subject complex (e.g., all SD variables belong to the sociodemographics subject complex). The subsequent two-digit number is consecutive but does not continue without gaps, because not all items and constructs were surveyed in each wave.

If the two-digit number is followed by the letter “O,” this means that it is an open-ended variable (see notes on scale). The letter “M,” on the other hand, refers to multiple answers (M1, M2, M3, etc.). All other letters (A, B, C, etc.) indicate that a variable relates to a previous variable in terms of content.

Statements such as “_1” or “_2” indicate that the question used to elicit the construct measured in the corresponding variable has changed substantially compared to the one used in previous waves. An overview of all changes can be found on the Weizenbaum Panel website.

The variable names correspond to those in the associated data set.

A detailed documentation of all questions follows, which includes the following information in addition to the variable names and question titles:

Filter Filters indicate whether a question or individual items have been filtered based on previous responses. The filtering is described according to the following pattern:

IF “Filter variable” OPERATOR “Response to filter variable.”

The following operators are possible: = < >

Example: “IF SD_02=01” means that the question to which the filter is assigned was only asked if question SD_02 was previously answered with the value of 01.

In contrast, “IF MN_14<09” means that the question was only asked if the respondent gave an answer with a value less than 09 to question MN_14.

The same pattern is used to describe the filtering of individual items, but the term “Item” and the corresponding item variable that is being filtered is added before the IF condition.

Example: “Item MN_32 IF MN_03=01”

The term “IF PANEL>01” means that interviewers did not ask this question to those respondents who had already been interviewed in the previous survey wave—for instance, because the information in question was already on file.

The information “IF SAMPLE=01” means that the question was only asked to those respondents from the partial sample of the FU Berlin (n = 1,074). Conversely, “IF SAMPLE>01” indicates that this question was asked only of the subsample surveyed by UADS (n = 521).

If no filter is noted, the question was asked of all respondents.

Programming	Notes on special features in programming, e.g., “rotation of items” or possibility of multiple answers (incl. indication of the minimum and maximum number of answers allowed).
Question text	Wording of the question as it was read to respondents.
Items	Formulation of items as they were read to respondents (item batteries only).
Scale	Answer options Open-ended statements are recorded in separate variables, but are tied to specific responses in standardized recorded variables. Example: The variable “SD_05O” contains open response data on the answer “09 Other country:” in “SD_05”—which is a standardized variable. To make this clear, the name of the variable with the open-response option is placed in square brackets after the corresponding answer specification, following the example above: “09 Other country: [SD_05O]”.
Interview instructions	Notes for interviewers that were not read to respondents.

Items:

- | | |
|---------|--|
| PT_03_1 | I can understand and assess important political issues well. |
| PT_04_1 | Politicians strive to maintain close contact with the people. |
| PT_05_1 | I have the confidence to actively participate in a conversation about political issues. |
| PT_06_2 | Politicians care about what members of the public think. |
| PT_07_2 | For the most part, you can trust the government to do the right thing. |
| PT_21_1 | The political opposition should support the government’s work instead of criticizing it. |
| PT_22_1 | Our government would function better if independent experts made the decisions. |
| PT_23_1 | Politicians don’t have a clue; even I could do better than them. |
| PT_24_1 | No matter who you vote for, it doesn’t make a difference to what happens in politics. |
| PT_25_1 | Everyone has the right to take to the streets to demonstrate for what they believe in at any time. |
| PT_26_1 | Democracy requires participation by everyone, not just by the parties. |
| PT_27 | In a democracy, better political decisions can be made when citizens can participate in making those decisions through public discussions. |
| PT_28 | In a democracy, better political decisions can be made when citizens are regularly consulted. |
